Popular Attractions

Palma Cathedral

This cathedral is the main religious building on the island of Mallorca. In Mallorcan culture, it is known as La Seu. The cathedral's architecture consists of a Levantine Gothic style temple. Additionally, the cathedral was built on the shores of the Palma Bay. It wasn't until 1931 was it finally declared a historical-artistic monument.

Castle of Bellver

This Gothic-style castle was built in the beginning of the 14th century. The castle is located on a mountain that is about 112 meters above sea level surrounded by an amazing and luscious forest. Additionally you can clearly see the view of the city, the port, the Serra de Tramuntana (Spain's mountain range), and the district Pla de Mallorca. Due to its intricate and detailed designs, its ancient name literally translates to “Bella Vista” (beautiful view).

Popular Attractions

Cap of Formentor

The Cap of Formentor is the northernmost land of the Mallorca islands. At this point, the winds and waves collide against the rocks, shaping the rugged coastline day by day. At some points, the cliffs can reach about 300 meters high. You can also go up to the Formentor's lighthouse and look at the beautiful view of the city and the ocean.

Palace Real of Almudaina

The Almudaina is the royal palace of Mallorca and one of the many places for the Spanish Royal Family. Managed by the National Patrimony, the walls are decorated with history and intricate designs. Additionally, the exact year of its origin are unknown, however, the architecture strongly corresponds with designs built in the 14th century.
